Air District Lifts Summit Fire Smoke Advisory

SAN FRANCISCO – The Bay Area Air Quality Management District has lifted the smoke advisory that was issued Friday in the Bay Area due to impacts from the Summit Fire in the Santa Cruz Mountains.

Fine particulate matter levels in the Bay Area have come back into the normal range. The heavy smoke has dissipated and weather conditions are favorable for extinguishing the fire.

The Air District will continue to monitor and measure the particulate matter impacts from smoke in the downwind areas and issue additional advisories if conditions warrant.
