Eleventh consecutive Winter Spare the Air Alert called for Monday, January 12 Use of wood-burning devices continues to be prohibited

SAN FRANCISCO – The Bay Area Air Quality Management District is issuing the season's seventeenth Winter Spare the Air Alert for Monday, January 12, which bans burning wood, manufactured fire logs or any other solid fuel, both indoors and outdoors for 24 hours.

A high pressure weather system is still in place over the region, resulting in unhealthy air quality. These weather conditions are expected to continue at least through the early part of the week. Monday's Winter Spare the Air Alert ties the record for the number of consecutive alert days set in December 2013.

"Our air quality inspectors continue to patrol daily," said Jack Broadbent, executive officer of the Air District. "Overall, we are seeing less wood burning, but with these weather conditions, a handful of fireplaces burning in an area can significantly impact neighborhoods and the entire region."

It is illegal for Bay Area residents and businesses to use their fireplaces, woodstoves, pellet stoves, outdoor fire pits or any other wood-burning devices during a Winter Spare the Air Alert. Homes without permanently installed heating, where woodstoves or fireplaces are the only source of heat, are exempt.

Like cigarette smoke, wood smoke contains fine particles and carcinogenic substances that make the air harmful to breathe inside and outside the home. Wood smoke is the major source of air pollution in the Bay Area in the wintertime and is especially harmful to children, the elderly, and people with respiratory conditions. During the 2013-14 winter season, the Air District called a total of 30 Winter Spare the Air Alerts.

First-time violators will be given the option of taking a wood smoke awareness class, online or by mail, to learn about the hazards of wood smoke pollution in lieu of paying a $100 ticket. Second violations will result in a $500 ticket, and subsequent ticket amounts will be higher.

The public must check before they burn during the Winter Spare the Air season, which runs from November 1 through February 28. The daily burn status can be found:

In the winter, wood smoke from the 1.4 million fireplaces and wood stoves in the Bay Area is the single largest source of air pollution, contributing about one-third of the harmful fine particulate pollution in the air. One fireplace burning can pollute an entire neighborhood. Exposure to wood smoke—like cigarette smoke—has been linked to serious respiratory illnesses and even increased risk of heart attacks. Breathing fine particulate accounts for more than 90 percent of premature deaths related to air pollution.

The Bay Area Air Quality Management District (www.baaqmd.gov) is the regional agency responsible for protecting air quality in the nine-county Bay Area.
