Air District asks public to not burn wood over New Year's holiday Wood burning and personal fireworks displays strongly discouraged

SAN FRANCISCO – The Bay Area Air Quality Management District is asking the public to not burn wood in their fireplaces or woodstoves over the New Year's holiday to keep air quality from becoming unhealthy.

While air quality is expected to be good to moderate throughout the Bay Area, wood burning during the New Year's holiday can significantly impact localized areas and neighborhoods. Wood burning can also significantly impact indoor air quality. A Spare the Air Alert is NOT in effect and wood burning is not illegal. However, wood burning is strongly discouraged at this time.

The Air District is also asking residents to refrain from setting off personal fireworks displays this holiday weekend. Fireworks and wood smoke can cause an unhealthy spike in air pollution and create excess smoke and ash in neighborhoods.

“Let's all celebrate the New Year and protect the health of our family and neighbors by refraining from wood burning and personal fireworks displays,” said Jack Broadbent, executive officer of the Air District. “Both wood burning and fireworks can create significant air pollution in our neighborhoods. Together, we can ensure that all Bay Area residents enjoy cleaner air this holiday weekend.”

Like cigarette smoke, wood smoke contains fine particles and carcinogenic substances that make the air unhealthy to breathe. Wood smoke is the major source of air pollution in the Bay Area in the wintertime and is especially harmful to children, the elderly and people with respiratory conditions.
