Air District Board confirms Sharon Landers as interim executive officer

SAN FRANCISCO – Today, the Bay Area Air Quality Management District Board of Directors voted to retain Sharon Landers as the interim executive officer beginning Monday, May 23, for a nine-month contract.

Ms. Landers will serve as the Air District's interim executive officer while the Air District Board begins its search for a candidate to permanently fill the role.

Over the past 24 years, Ms. Landers has served at the executive management level in a variety of public agencies including transportation authorities, redevelopment agencies and cities. She has extensive experience in government operations including transportation, sustainability and social equity as well as a background in public sector law.

Ms. Landers has a B.S. degree in Computer Science and Psychology from the State University of New York, and a JD from Albany Law School.
